

In 2005, the Santa Clara City Council approved a goal of 75% of all non-public safety sedans to be ultra-low or zero-emission vehicles by June, 2008. With 61 of the 70 vehicles now in place, the City has surpassed that goal six months early. Hybrid vehicles are used by meter readers, building inspectors and other City workers who need to travel out of the office to provide services to the community.

Sustainable green fleet ahead of schedule

The City's total fleet of 180 includes five electric vehicles and 70 hybrids. As more energy-efficient vehicles become available for public safety and operations use, the City plans to add to its sustainable green fleet. It is already on the waiting list for one of the first hybrid aerial bucket trucks to be manufactured. Municipal vehicles running on traditional fuels are meticulously maintained to operate as efficiently as possible.
